

UN 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development - Public Consultation on revising the European Consensus on Development

Fields marked with * are mandatory.

(1) Introduction

The year 2015 was a strategic milestone for global governance, poverty eradication and sustainable development. It marked the target date of the UN Millennium Development Goals and a point to reflect on the progress made to date and the challenges ahead in addressing their unfinished business. 2015 also saw a series of landmark international summits and conferences over the course of the year (the Sendai Framework for Disaster Risk Reduction 2015-2030, the Addis Ababa Action Agenda, the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development and the COP 21 Paris Agreement under the UN Framework Convention on Climate Change) which have collectively re-cast the way the international community, including the EU, will work to achieve sustainable development and poverty eradication for many years.

Importantly, and in contrast to the Millennium Development Goals, the 2030 Agenda, including its seventeen Sustainable Development Goals, is a universal Agenda which applies to all countries. It reflects many core European values and interests and provides an international framework for tackling global challenges such as climate change. The EU response to the 2030 Agenda is moving ahead in a range of ways:

- Firstly, as part of EU efforts to implement the 2030 Agenda, the Commission Work Programme for 2016 announces an initiative on the next steps for a sustainable European future which will explain how the EU contributes to reaching the Sustainable Development Goals and map out the internal and external aspects of EU policies contributing to the implementation of the Sustainable Development Goals.
- Secondly, the High Representative will present the EU Global Strategy on Foreign and Security Policy that is expected to steer the different EU external policies contributing to the global vision of a more stable, prosperous and secure world. It should set out the strategic direction for the full range of EU external action, and as such will help guide EU implementation of the 2030 Agenda in external action.
- Thirdly, the EU will review its development cooperation policy. Existing leading policy documents (including the 2005 European Consensus on Development and the 2011 Agenda for Change) are currently framed around the Millennium Development Goals and need to adapt to incorporate the 2030 Agenda. Given its direct relevance to the EU's overall relations with developing countries, this review will be carried out in full consistency with the ongoing work on the future of the partnership between the EU and the members of the African, Caribbean and Pacific Group of States, under a post-Cotonou framework.

Views from this consultation will be used to inform the way forward on the initiatives above and in particular the revision of the European Consensus on Development and other external aspects of 2030 Agenda implementation. The consultation seeks your views on how development policy, in the context of EU external action as foreseen by the Lisbon Treaty, should respond to the range of landmark 2015 summits and conferences, and also to the rapid changes happening in the world.

Replies can include views which could apply only to the EU institutions and also to both the EU and its Member States – it would be helpful to clarify this in your response. This open public consultation will run for 12 weeks from 30 May 2016 to 21 August 2016. A brief summary and analysis of all consultation contributions will be published by November 2016 and all individual contributions will also be made available on the consultation website (unless respondents ask for their contributions not to be published).

(3) Context: why a change is needed

The EU and its Member States are determined to implement the 2030 Agenda through internal and external actions as well as contribute to the successful implementation of the Paris Agreement on Climate Change, given the strong interlinkages. In this context, our policies, should take into account changing global conditions and trends, to ensure that they remain fit-for-purpose across the time-horizon to 2030.

The global landscape has changed significantly compared to the time of adoption of the Millennium Development Goals. While much has been achieved, with more than one billion people having been lifted out of extreme poverty since 1990, great challenges remain and new ones are emerging. At global level, more than 800 million people still live on less than USD 1.25 a day. The world is witnessing multiple conflicts and security tensions, complex humanitarian and global health crises, deteriorations of human rights, environmental degradation, resource scarcity, urbanisation and migration. Migration flows across the world will continue to have important impacts, and present both a risk and an opportunity. The EU needs to address global security challenges, including tackling the root causes of conflict and instability and countering violent extremism. Climate change can continue to amplify problems and can severely undermine progress. Important changes include demographic trends, a new distribution of wealth and power between and within countries, the continuing globalisation of economies and value chains, an evolving geography of poverty and a proliferation of actors working on development. Projections also suggest important challenges are ahead (for example, continuing unprecedented urbanisation, and other demographic challenges including ageing societies for some and the potential for a demographic dividend for others). Continued attention will be given to a democratic, stable and prosperous neighbourhood. A revision to EU development policy should take into account these trends (including anticipating those that will remain central in future) whilst retaining a core focus on eradicating poverty and finishing the job started by the Millennium Development Goals.

Finally, the EU Consensus needs also to adapt to the Lisbon Treaty, which provides for all external action policies to work within the frameworks and pursue the principles of objectives of Article 21 of the Treaty on European Union. In particular, coherence between the different parts of EU external action and between external and internal policies is crucial.

The EU will need to address these new global challenges, many of which require coordinated policy action at the national, regional and global levels. The 2030 Agenda provides a framework which can guide us in doing so.

3.1 There is a range of key global trends (e.g. changing geography and depth of poverty; challenges related to climate change, political, economic, social, demographic, security, environmental or technological) which will influence the future of development and the implementation of the 2030 Agenda. Which of these do you think is the most important?

General AT Comments

- Structure: as right now, there should be two parts, one addressing EU MS and EU institutions and the other one addressing EU institutions only
- Common objectives: “ ... eradication of poverty in the context of sustainable development” and contribute to the SDGs
- Values of 2005 are still valid; common principles should be reviewed. Add new ones: “PCD (Policy Coherence for Development) – from theory to practice”, “tackling root causes of migration”, “managing environment and natural resources sustainably” and “making global responsible value chains a reality”
- In order to put PCD into practice, we must overcome the “silo thinking” by putting more emphasis on the interlinkages between interrelated topics (e.g. development and trade).
- Keep expectations with regard to what development cooperation can deliver at a realistic level.
- Bear in mind that development policy goes far beyond classical development assistance encompassing both foreign and domestic sectoral policies in an interrelated way.
- DG Neighbourhood should be part of and take part in the review of the Consensus from the very beginning
- The new Consensus needs to be coherent with the Global Strategy, the Post Cotonou Process, the European Consensus on Humanitarian Aid and the Sendai Framework for Disaster Risk Reduction. Furthermore it should take into account the results of international UN conferences on relevant topics, like the Vienna Programme of Action for Landlocked Developing Countries for the decade 2014 -2024.

on question 3.1.

Realizing that the challenges we are facing today, do not stop at national, sectoral, ethnical or whatever other borders and to act accordingly are the most important tasks we are facing. Implementing the SDGs is about putting PCD into practice.

Key global trends:

- migration / displacement
- climate change and its consequences
- environmental degradation
- natural resources becoming scarce - more competition and tensions
- increasing number of conflicts, growing instability and fragility
- demographic developments
- growing inequality within and between societies

3.2 How should EU policies, and development policy in particular, better harness the opportunities and minimise the negative aspects of the trend you identified in the previous question?

- Overcome silos, but keep procedures and contents as simple as possible
 - Positive aspects: holistic approach, seeing an issue from various angles
 - Negative aspects: risk of too extensive coordination procedures and inefficient implementation
- Inter- and transdisciplinary Research for Development
- Ensure the linkage and coordination of short- mid- and long-term initiatives in the security and development nexus

(4) Priorities for our future action: what we need to do

Implementation of the 2030 Agenda will require sustained EU efforts to promote a more just world, including a strong focus on the need to address gender equality and women's empowerment. Peace, inclusiveness, equality and good governance including democracy, accountability, rule of law, human rights and non-discrimination will need particular emphasis. The 2030 Agenda also requires recognition of the close interconnectedness between poverty, social issues, economic transformation, climate change and environmental issues.

To achieve poverty eradication, EU development policy will need to take into account key demographic and environmental trends, including challenges related to climate change, and concentrate effort on least developed countries and fragile states. The EU will also need to strengthen our approach to fragility and conflict, fostering resilience and security (as an increasing proportion of the world's poor are expected to live in fragile and conflict affected states) and to protect global public goods and to maintain our resource base as the prerequisite for sustainable growth. Peace and security, including security sector reform, will have to be addressed also through our development policy, as will the risks and opportunities related to migration flows. Tackling social and economic inequalities (both within and between countries) is a crucial element of the 2030 Agenda as is addressing environmental degradation and climate change. Job creation will be an important challenge in which the private sector has to play an active role. Finishing the job of the Millennium Development Goals requires identifying and reaching those people throughout the world who are still not benefitting from progress to ensure that no one is left behind.

To achieve lasting results, EU development policy will need to foster transformation and promote inclusive and sustainable growth. Drivers of inclusive sustainable growth, such as human development, renewable energy, sustainable agriculture and fisheries, and healthy and resilient oceans should be an important part of our efforts to implement the new Agenda as will efforts aimed at tackling hunger and under-nutrition. Implementation of the 2030 Agenda will require a multi-dimensional, integrated approach to human development. Implementation will also require us to address vectors of change, such as sustainable urban development and relevant use of information and communication technology. Our development policy will have to engage and identify new ways of partnering with the business in order to achieve sustainable and inclusive growth, industrialisation and innovation. Implementation of the 2030 Agenda will also require cooperation with partner countries and regions on science, technology and innovation. In all aspects of our external action, the EU will need to ensure that our approaches, including development cooperation, are conducive to achieving the 2030 Agenda's Sustainable Development Goals and that the EU intensifies efforts to promote pursue coherence between our policies and our internal and external action.

4.1 How can the EU better address the links between achieving the Sustainable Development Goals, the Paris Agreement on climate change and addressing other global sustainable development challenges?

Cross sector approach under the umbrella of the SDGs
Joint working groups on specific issues
Strengthen coherence between different funding instruments (DCI, EDF, ENI, ...)

4.2 How should the EU strengthen the balanced integration of the economic, social and environmental dimensions of sustainable development in its internal and external policies, and in particular in its development policy?

By mainstreaming sustainable development as a key issue in all policies, programs and projects, reflecting the three pillars of sustainability in a balanced way.

By promoting multi-stakeholder engagement, including civil society actors and younger generations, advocating for sustainability.

Recommending the integration of Education for Sustainable Development as a key part in education and research.

4.3 What are the main changes you would like to see in the EU's development policy framework?

- Increase flexibility in order to improve reactions to new challenges, while not losing the long term character of Development Cooperation.
- Strengthening PCD and putting special emphasis on linking Humanitarian Aid to Development Cooperation.
- Putting more emphasis on coordination between Humanitarian Aid, Development Cooperation and Security Policy in the framework of international crisis- and conflict management.

4.4 In which areas highlighted above would you expect to see greater consistency between development policy and other areas of the EU external action in the implementation of the 2030 Agenda?

- Migration
- Poverty reduction
- Social progress
- Demographic change
- Environment, natural resources, climate change
- International trade and private sector engagement
- Democratization and rule of law
- Linking relief, rehabilitation and development
- Neighbourhood policy
- Pre-accession policy
- Defence & security policies
- Fight against illicit trade, including firearms trafficking
- Anti-Corruption and stolen asset recovery
- Health in all policies (HIAP)

4.5 In which areas does the EU have greatest value-added as a development partner (e.g. which aspects of its development policy, dialogue or implementation arrangements or in which category of countries)?

- Regional integration and cooperation
- Private sector engagement
- Tackling environmental issues
- Environmentally sustainable technology - transfer of know - how
- Peace building and conflict prevention, including through economic integration
- Democratization and rule of law

4.6 How can the EU refine its development policy to better address inequalities – including gender inequality – in the context of the implementation of the 2030 Agenda?

- By recognizing that increasing inequalities can undermine social cohesion and decreasing social cohesion can cause riots and conflict – fighting inequality contributes to preventing conflict
- By supporting partner country's policies to that end
- By cooperation with civil society, including the private sector

Gender:

- By using gender disaggregated data
- By ensuring gender mainstreaming in all policy areas
- By setting clear targets for the promotion of gender equality, including indicators and monitoring mechanisms
- By understanding SDG Goal No 5 on gender equality not as one goal among others, but as a crosscutting issue relevant to all of the 17 goals

The EU can address inequalities by supporting

- equal access to opportunities and services
- diversity in education / public and private sectors
- engagement of youth and opportunities for youth
- ensure community engagement / participatory and inclusive approaches in development policy and implementation / multi-stakeholder engagement

4.7 How can the EU development policy make a stronger contribution to the security of people? How can EU development policy contribute to addressing the root causes of conflict and fragility and contribute to security and resilience in all the countries where we work?

Development Cooperation can make a difference if combined with other relevant external action policies and if perceived credible, authentic and coherent. Most relevant in this context are diplomacy, security policy, economic cooperation and sustainable trade, etc.

We need to further analyse the experience of close cooperation between security forces and development cooperation and build on the lessons learned.

Communicating that development cooperation can – at best – contribute to address root causes of conflict and fragility, will help us to keep expectations at a more realistic level.

Ensure conflict-sensitivity of development cooperation

Put a human security agenda (addressing people's/civilians' security concerns) at the centre of security policy

Policy research (e.g. JRC – Joint Research Centers, Horizon 2020)
Capacity-building and security and justice sector reform

4.8 How can a revised Consensus on Development better harness the opportunities presented by migration, minimise the negative aspects of irregular migration on the implementation of the 2030 Agenda and better address the root causes of irregular migration and forced displacement?

- By tackling challenges in an integrated way,
- By explaining the benefits of migration
- Consistent adherence to a human rights based approach (in the countries of origin and on the routes of migrants and refugees) will help address negative aspects

(5) Means of implementation: how do we get there?

The principle of universality underpinning the 2030 Agenda will require a differentiated approach to engagement with countries at all levels of development. Official Development Assistance will continue to play an important role in the overall financing mix for those countries most in need (particularly the Least Developed Countries). The EU and its Member States should continue to progress towards achieving their commitments. However, in all countries our development cooperation will need to take account of other sources of finance, including by leveraging other (non-Official Development Assistance) sources of finance for poverty eradication and sustainable development. The delivery of the 2030 Agenda means that our work helping countries raise their own resources (domestic resource mobilisation), the provision of aid for trade, blending* and partnering with the private sector should be priority areas of focus. The Addis Ababa Action Agenda, an integral part of the 2030 Agenda, provides a framework for our efforts, including for our work supporting the right enabling policy environment for sustainable development in our partner countries. The implementation of the 2030 Agenda and the Paris Agreement on climate change under the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change should be closely coordinated given the strong interlinkages. Engagement with middle income countries, notably the emerging economies, will be important to the implementation of the 2030 Agenda, considering the role they can play in promoting global public goods, what they can achieve within their respective countries on poverty eradication and sustainable development, and the example they can set within their regions as well as their role in regional processes. Here differentiated partnerships can play an important role (examples include different forms of political, economic, and financial investment as well as cooperation in science, technology and innovation). Specific attention and focus should also be given to Least Developed Countries, as acknowledged by the Addis Ababa Action Agenda.

The EU's implementation of the 2030 Agenda provides an opportunity for enhancing consistency between the different areas of the EU's external action and between these and other EU policies (as outlined in the Lisbon Treaty and in EU's Comprehensive Approach to external conflict and crises). The EU will continue to pursue Policy Coherence for Development as a key contribution to the collective effort towards broader policy coherence for sustainable development. In our external action, the EU needs to consider how we can use all policies, tools, instruments at our disposal coherently in line with the integrated nature of the 2030 Agenda.

* Combining EU grants with loans or with equity from other public and private financiers with a view to leveraging additional resources.

5.1 How can EU policies, and EU development policy in particular, help to mobilise and maximise the impact of the increasing variety of sustainable development finance, including in particular from the private sector?

Maximising leverage effects by combining loans and grants

5.2 Given the evolving availability of other sources of finance and bearing in mind the EU's commitments on Official Development Assistance (e.g. Council Conclusions from 26 May 2015 on "A New Global Partnership for Poverty Eradication and Sustainable Development after 2015", and inter alia, paragraphs 32 and 33), how and where should the EU use its Official Development Assistance strategically and to maximise its impact?

ODA should be used where it is most needed, where other forms of financing are not available and where there is sufficient absorption capacity.

ODA can also play a role in mitigating risks that may lead to failed states or it can be used for stabilization and reconstruction purposes in post conflict situations.

ODA should also be used in a catalytical way to attract and leverage financing from the private sector and to provide for a more effective domestic resource mobilization.

5.3 How can the EU better support partner countries in mobilising their own resources for poverty eradication and sustainable development?

- By abolishing tax havens, fighting corruption, helping to recover stolen assets and by promoting country by country reporting.
- By supporting the abolishment of counter - productive incentives as well as subsidies (greening of tax systems)
- By supporting growth of the formal sector of economy
- By countering illicit capital flows
- By contributing to capacity-building, transparency and accountability of partner country institutions, using modern IT-based technologies
- By supporting sustainable, sovereign debt management
- By promoting education to mobilise human resources

5.4 Given the importance of middle income countries to the implementation of the 2030 Agenda, what form could differentiated partnerships take?

- Moving from grant aid to economic cooperation.
- Institutional cooperation / knowledge-exchange with a focus on strengthening accountability / checks and balances / social equality and inclusion
- Focusing on promoting global public goods, such as fighting climate change and the environment.

5.5 Given experience so far in taking into account the objectives of development cooperation in the implementation of EU policies which are likely to affect developing countries (e.g. Policy Coherence for Development: 2015 EU Report), how should the EU step up its efforts to achieve Policy Coherence for Development, as a key contribution to the collective effort towards policy coherence for sustainable development? How can we help ensure that policies in developing countries, and internationally contribute coherently to sustainable development priorities?

- Putting PCD into reality needs political support in order to overcome “silo thinking”.
- If we want to achieve progress in tackling challenges like climate change or migration, we need coherent strategies and we need to negotiate as equal partners.

(6) The actors: making it work together

An important feature of the new Agenda is that all governments, developed and developing, will need to work with a wide range of stakeholders (including the private sector, civil society and research institutions) to improve the transparency and inclusivity of decision-making, planning, service delivery, and monitoring and to ensure synergy and complementarity.

The EU must continue to work collaboratively with others and contribute to a coordinated approach. The Addis Ababa Action Agenda puts national plans for implementation (including associated financing and policy frameworks) at the centre. To maximise our impact, EU development policy should be based on a strategic and comprehensive strategy for each country, which also responds to the country-specific context.

Our partner countries' implementation of the 2030 Agenda will inform our overall engagement and our development cooperation dialogue with them and will help shape our support for their national efforts. The EU should also help partner countries put in place the necessary enabling policy frameworks to eradicate poverty, tackle sustainable development challenges and enhance their policy coherence.

There is a need for a renewed emphasis on the quality of development cooperation, including existing commitments on aid and development effectiveness made in Paris, Accra and Busan* and through work with the Global Partnership for Effective Development Cooperation.

An updated EU development policy should also provide a shared vision that guides the action of the EU and Member States in development cooperation, putting forward proposals on how to further enhance coordination, complementarity and coherence between EU and Member States. Strengthening Joint Programming will be an important part of this. Improving the division of labour between the EU and its Member States in order to reduce aid fragmentation will also contribute to increased development effectiveness.

* See Paris Declaration on Aid Effectiveness and the Accra Agenda for Action and the Busan Partnership for Effective Development Cooperation

6.1 How should the EU strengthen its partnerships with civil society, foundations, the business community, parliaments and local authorities and academia to support the implementation of the 2030 Agenda (including the integral Addis Ababa Action Agenda) and the Paris Agreement on climate change?

Emphasising multi-stakeholder partnerships, transparency initiatives and research networks.

6.2 How can the EU promote private sector investment for sustainable development?

By contributing to a conducive business environment
By helping to reduce political and security risks
By co-financing partnership initiatives

6.3 How can the EU strengthen relations on sustainable development with other countries, international financing institutions, multilateral development banks, emerging donors and the UN system?

Active multilateralism

By actively seeking to cooperate, coordinate policies and activities and promote cofinancing with Multilateral Development Banks, both, in headquarters and on a country-level.

6.4 How can the EU best support partner countries to develop comprehensive and inclusive national plans for the implementation of the 2030 Agenda?

By capacity-building and technical assistance (e.g. statistical capacity at partner country level, trade related capacity);
By fostering exchange between parliaments and civil society on specific issues

6.5 What are the best ways to strengthen and improve coherence, complementarity and coordination between the EU and the Member States in their support to help partner countries achieve poverty eradication and sustainable development?

Joint analysis / joint strategies
Joint programming
Joint implementation
Division of labour / Delegated Cooperation

6.6 How can EU development cooperation be as effective as possible, and how can we work with all partners to achieve this?

By keeping it simple

By further strengthening:

- partner-country orientation
- results orientation
- transparency
- inclusive partnerships

(= the Busan principles)

6.7 What further progress could be made in EU Joint Programming, and how could this experience be linked with other EU joined-up actions in supporting countries' delivery of the 2030 Agenda?

further deepen joint analysis / strategies, and move towards joint implementation, both within an SDG-oriented framework, including capacity-building components

(7) Keeping track of progress

The EU will need to contribute to the global follow-up and review process for the 2030 Agenda. Keeping track of progress in a systematic and transparent way is essential for delivering the 2030 Agenda. The EU is actively contributing to the setting up of a Sustainable Development Goal monitoring system at global, regional and national level. Demonstrating results and impact from our efforts and the promotion of transparency will be important priorities for EU development policy, as part of a wider move to strengthen accountability, follow-up and review at all levels.

7.1 How can the EU strengthen its own use of evidence and analysis, including in the development field, to feed into its regular review on the Sustainable Development Goals to the UN?

Align established instruments, result frameworks and associated reporting with relevant SDG targets and indicators

7.2 How can the EU help to ensure the accountability of all actors involved in implementation of the 2030 Agenda, including the private sector? How can the EU encourage a strong and robust approach to the Follow Up and Review of the 2030 Agenda from all actors?

By adapting reporting requirements to the SDG context

By raising awareness, especially of European Citizens, as an important step to ensure a high participation rate in the multi-stakeholder approaches.

By leading by example

- in promoting multi-stakeholder approaches for monitoring
- in strengthening the role of parliaments and supreme audit institutions in the monitoring process.

By encouraging and promoting to involve the aims of SDGs and Education for Sustainable Development in education and research.

7.3 How should EU development cooperation respond to the regular reviews on progress of the partner countries towards the 2030 Agenda goals?

Through participation in and contribution to country-based/country-driven development partners coordination mechanisms
